Sinking Large Stones.

The cheapest and most effectual way to rid the land of large stones is to dig a large hole beside them, roll them in and fill up, adding enough additional earth from the roadsides to make the surface level. It seems queer that after rolling a large stone in a newly dug hole that more dirt will be needed to fill it up, but in most soils experience shows this to be a fact. Digging pulverizes the soil, enabling it to pack more closely than before.

Hints to Housekeepers. A tablespoonful of sods added to the water in which ironware is washed will facilitate the cleaning.

A creaking hinge can be cured the use of a black-lead pencil of the softest number, the point rubbed into all the crevices of the hinge.

Our Southern Letter.

The iron ore deposits of Alabama limonite, or brown e, siderite, or carbonate ore, and pyrite or pyrites. The hematite, or as it is usually called, red hematite, is the most important. When pure it yields about 70 per cent of high grade metallic iron. This deposit is not only the largest in Northern Alabama, but is regarded by scientific men as one of the mineral wonders of the world. One seam has in places a thickness of nearly 35 feet. The ore is regularly stratified between layers of hard sandstone and shale.

If the different workable outcrops of 18 inches or over in Northern Alabama were connected in a straight line, they would extend over 800 miles, and every foot in depth would yield 237,000 toas of metallic iron; or in other words, if worked to the depth of one hundred feet, it would yield 23,700,000 tons, or 94.800.000 cubic feet of solid metallic

A Valuable Decision.

The English courts have lately decided that in a case "where a wound is given, which, in the opinion of competent medical advisers, is dangerous, and the treatment which they adopted | p ns for the hair, and a gold necklace is the immediate cause of death, the party who inflicted the wound is criminally responsible." This decision was was reached in a case in which it was sought to shift the responsibility, from the person who inflicted the wound, to the doctors, who sought to save the hair were carved in the most minute be of use. Cut the melon in thin slices, man's life. Thus the surgeon is free and careful way, the latter waving low from more than ordinary responsibility on the forehead, and bound with a filin treating such cases. As a result he will be inclined to undertake operations that otherwise he would not, and so give the accused a better chance of avoiding the charge of murder.

Kitchen Brushes. BY ANNA CURD.

In the never-ending round of housework we stumble sometimes inadvertently upon ways of helping ourselves over the hill of difficulty. They may not always be "mother's ways"-oftentimes they are better ways, more in keeping with the wide-awake, progressive ideas of the times in which we

In this way I learned the true value of the ordinary scrubbing-brush. I stumbled upon it accidentally, and now so varied are its uses in my kitchen that I am not sure but 1 would let it head my list of household conveniences.

For five cents apiece you can buy these little scrubbing-brushes without handles; or for seven cents a good, strong brush with a handle, similar in strong brush with a nandle, similar in shape to the ordinary blacking-brush, except smaller, can be bought at any notion or drug store. "While you're gittin', git a plenty," was old Mrs. Means's advice to Mr. Means about buying up Government land-three will be none too many. Buy those with handles if possible, but, if not obtainable, the others will answer very well, as you can put a small screw-eye into the end of each brush, and hang it on a brass hook screwed into the side of the kitchen cupboard. A row of brass hooks with nice clean brushes appended will not mar the appearance of the tidiest kitchen.

The smallest brush, which should not be over three inches in length, can be made to do excellent service in washing Majolica ware, cut-glass tumblers, fruit bowls, preserve dishes; in fact, any kind of ware with a rough, corrugated surface can be kept clean and shining in this way. The same brush will work wonders in cleaning a grater, the rough side of which has been used to grate, cocoanut, chocolate, lemon or orange rinds upon. Every housekeeper knows how impossible it is to sugar several times while drying. When clean this utensil with dish-cloth or perfectly dry, pack in jars, with a layer mop. Perforated pie-tins, also, after an application of soap and brush will toes. Care must be taken not to let undergo a similar transformation.

The second-sized brush should be used exclusively for cleaning vegetables, and after having used one a short time you will wonder how you ever kept house without it. In the one item of preparing potatoes to bake, it will paid, so thoroughly does it do its work.

The third brush should be a little larger, and will be found invaluable in keeping clean the biscuit board, washiug the broiler and iron kettles.

One of the requisites of a tidy kitchen is a clean white table. The vigorous use of hot water, soap, and scrubbingbrush, with an occasional application of sand or sapolio, will drive out every vestige of dirt and grease, leaving the table in a spotless condition.

One of the most indispensable brushes for kitchen use is a sink brush. A broom brush, such as is used for brushing wearing apparel, answers nicely for the musty smell of a neglected dish-

House rolls, for instance, it is necessary, after rolling out the risen dough, to cut with a biscuit cutter, rub over with melted butter, and fold; this process can be very much expedited by the use of a good new varnish brush kept for culinary purposes alone. Do not attempt to e.onomize too closely; pay a price sufficiently large to warrant a well-made brush. A small round one is best. In laundrying the fringed furnishings for dining-room and chambers, such as lunch cloths, doilies, tidies, and scarfs, comb the fringe first, and then with a stiff new nail or tooth brush continue brushing until it is soft and

The exchange of deas relating to the home, with improved methods in the ways of doing the daily routine of every-day life, is growing in favor constantly. Many of these ideas, when whittled down, are not practical, but, on the other hand, many bristle with good points, worthy in every way of imitation .- Christian Union.

An Ancient Doll.

Last May, near the Hadrian's Villa, in Rome, were found at a depth of thirty feet below the surface, two stone burial caskets. In one of them was the perfect skeleton of a little girl wrapped in linen which, upon exposure to air. fell rapidly to dust. Upon her head fingers were four rings, one of them with her name, "Filetus," engraved nicely. upon it. Soil for Nursery Stock.

A dry, loamy soil not excessively rich is best for growing young trees for sale. There must be potash in the soil, but until fruit trees get into bearing, they need less of other plant-food than do most farm crops. In moderately heavy soils, potash is seldom lacking, and on these good drainage and cultivation are more important than manure. The bulk of growth of leaves and wood is carbon, and is drawn from the air through the leaves. If nitrogenous manures are largely used they make a soft, sappy growth, that is easily killed by severe cold. I besides this young trees thus we are ant to be too much checked "Yes; if you want to take your luggage transpanied into soil less stimu- along with you. liated by manures.

TOMATOES (ripe).

Select a half peck of fine, smooth, tomates, not over-ripe. Scald, peel and weigh them, and to each pound of tomatoes allow one pound of sugar, the juice and rind of half a lemon, a small piece of ginger root cut into slices. Put all together in a porcelain-lined kettle, and simmer gently for three hours then put carefully into tumblers or jurs and stand away to cool. When cool, tie up as directed.

TOMATOES (yellow). The small yellow tomatoes, with an equal quantity of grated pineapple, and preserved according to the preceding recipe, omitting the lemon and sugar, make most delightful preserves.

TOMATO BUTTER. Scald twenty pounds of rire tomatoes and remove the skins, put them in a porcelain - lined kettle with four pounds of apples pared, cored and quartered; stand over a moderate fire to cook slowly for one hour, stirring occasinally to prevent sticking, then add eight pounds of sugar, the juice of four lemons and and one tablespoonful of powdered ginger. Stew very gently until the sugar appears to have thoroughly penetrated the tomatoes. SENSIBLE SUMMER FOOD.

It is safe to say that the more raw, ripe, perfect fruit is eaten in a family. the better for all concerned. Apples should be staple eight months of the be worth to you ten times the price year, and every healthy child allowed at least half a dozen a day. When berries grow ripe and cheap and penty, buy of them generously, and eat them as nearly as possible in a state of nature. It may seem extravagant, but a little thought will show you that it is not. The first cost is all-there is no after outlay for fixing and fuel, to say nothing of time and temper and trou-ble. Upon a hot morning any human creature will feel better to breakfast upon bread, butter, berries and icewater, or milk, than if it had absorbed all the hot greasy creations that ever came off or out of a stove. Indeed, an excellent plan for hot weather is to boil a ham whole, leaving the skin on, and letting it cool in the water it was boiled this purpose.
